

Playlist for Creeper:

Good as Hell – Lizzo

Lizzo's song "Good As Hell" is the embodiment of self-love, positivity, growth and looking out for yourself. The justification behind dedicating this to Creeper is that she could use some positivity in her life, a friend like Lizzo to boost her. She "walked her fine ass out the door" ... of New Orleans. Creeper needs to be feeling good as hell if she is going to be able to stop the confederacy. I think that Lizzo's positivity could do a great number on Creeper's self-esteem. It has a wonderful message that could really help her and the crew out.

Who Run The World (girls) – Beyoncé

Beyoncé's "Run the World (Girls)" is a perfect song to represent Creeper and her crew in Black God's Drums. She is riding around in this airship full of badass women and they are totally running the world. This group of powerful women was successful in saving New Orleans and defeating the confederates. Besides, can't you just imagine Creeper and Ann-Maire riding around jamming to Beyoncé?

RESPECT - Aretha Franklin

Aretha Franklin's "Respect" is a great representation of Creeper in the novel. This girl rides around New Orleans commanding respect from everyone she meets. As Aretha says, she is gonna show you what it means to me.

Me And My Girls – Selena Gomez

I think you would like "Me & My Girls," Selena Gomez (2015) is about girls who take charge and stay true to each other. "if they want it, they take it," life, adventure, anything they need. If they need money, they take it, no one knows when they fake it. When they become someone, they are not in order to get done what needs to be done. There is no need for a "man," or to listen to the man. It also has a compelling riff that reminds me of horns from New Orleans

Cant Stop the Feeling by Justin Timberlake

It also has a compelling riff that reminds me of horns from New Orleans I also think you would like the song "Can't Stop that feeling" by Justin Timberlake. It is all about embracing emotion and making the most of life. The song reminds me of when you tried to convince Ann-Marie to embrace her inner goddess.

Letter for Creeper:

Dearest Miss Creeper,

How have you been? How are you doing? How is Oya doing? Have you been able manifest your superpowers from her, or are you getting better at it? I hear there's some war turmoil going on, hope all is well. Anyways, I just had a quick list that I wanted to send over of some songs that I thought you might appreciate. These songs got me through some tough times, so I hope they can do the same for you, they are real mood boosters.

1. Good As Hell by Lizzo
2. Who Run The World (girls) by Beyoncé (LOVE HER!)
3. RESPECT by Aretha Franklin
4. Me and My Girls by Selena Gomez
5. Cant Stop the Feeling by Justin Timberlake

The reasoning behind these songs might make you laugh, but they have some really good messages behind them! Lizzo's song "Good As Hell" is the embodiment of self-love, positivity, growth and looking out for yourself. The justification behind dedicating this to Creeper is that she could use some positivity in her life, a friend like Lizzo to boost her. She "walked her fine ass out the door" ... of New Orleans. Creeper needs to be feeling good as hell if she is going to be able to stop the confederacy. I think that Lizzo's positivity could do a great number on Creeper's self-esteem. It has a wonderful message that could really help her and the crew out. Beyonce's "Run the World (Girls)" is a perfect song to represent Creeper and her crew in Black God's Drums. She is riding around in this airship full of badass women and they are totally running the world. This group of powerful women was successful in saving New Orleans and defeating the confederates. Besides, can't you just imagine Creeper and Ann-Maire riding around jamming to Beyonce? Aretha Franklin's "Respect" is a great representation of Creeper in the novel. This girl rides around New Orleans commanding respect from everyone she meets. As Aretha says, she is gonna show you what it means to me. I think you would like "Me & My Girls," Salena Gomez (2015) is about girls who take charge and stay true to each other. "if they want it, they take it," life, adventure, anything they need. If they need money, they take it, no one knows when they fake it. When they become someone, they are not in order to get done what needs to be done. There is no need for a "man," or to listen to the man. It also has a compelling riff that reminds me of horns from New Orleans I also think you would like the song "Can't Stop that feeling" by Justin Timberlake. It is all about embracing emotion and making the most of life. The song reminds me of when you tried to convince Ann-Marie to embrace her inner goddess.